WHO ARE YOU AT WORK?; pg. 68

Aside from getting fit and being more organized, does your long term to-do list (or your extended New Year's resolution) include "get out of a rut at work?" Are you sick of playing the "good girl," "best friend" or office crisis manager? If so, check out columnist Mary Lou Quinlan's guide to reevaluating your workplace persona and transforming yourself into the professional you want to be.

SHARON STONE: STILL FIERY AT 48; pg. 90

Our favorite sexpot movie star is, these days, also a humanitarian, single mother of three. How she does it: passion, humor and work, work, work. With her newly released film, Bobby, and a suburban drama co-starring Justin Timberlake due out in January, Stone discusses with More her constant rediscovery. "A woman should have many faces through her life, not just one face, not just one hairdo, not just one way. You want to keep rediscovering what's fun for you."

THE WHITE ALBUM; pg. 96

White may seem innocent, but it sure pushes our style buttons. With looks from corporate workday to country weekend, check out how model Vendela Kirsebom creates her own spotlight in radiant winter whites. Here you'll find some of the most elegant, yet practical, ways to incorporate white into your wardrobe, allowing you to bask in the glow all season long.

10 THINGS TO KNOW BEFORE YOU CHANGE YOUR LIFE; pg. 107

"Reinvention isn't a trend, it's a revolution." After reinventing herself at 52, Susan Crandell, a founding editor of More, has compiled a list of the 10 things she wish she knew before quitting her job and reimagining her career. After interviewing dozens of others who took the plunge, Crandell now shares some of the key lessons she learned in hopes of guiding women who are interested in reshaping not just their lives, but the very concept of midlife.
